Go, Take in the Beauty
Welsh Hills

it starts with a bell then the harmonium

it is sunday after all

a piano wheeled to winter beach
before being chopped

beyond the seven miles
the seven hills

at dusk quiet river glow aside from the blank field

patched with darknes.

get a line to London
inland the birds
are circling

from the tower share the view from the second floor kitchen

watch the cloud roll in Honesty Box

This is not automatic it has to be earned

Capturing moments of sounds and noises before they escape through the ceiling

In the hopes of preserving something felt tip painted nails I will build a shared archive

Greenness of meadow redness of terminus lights

Early morning empty platforms prospect of four into two a day on the network

wait twenty years to search for peeled paint

Foliage insulation
good for cold May

Shell collecting a rippled shore wash the finds in pools

Follow tracks in soft sands keep the notes
focus on the corner chair Hold the seeds
to your face
walk The Pads

spot the scarecrows
spot the swallows

across to the city
see the cranes see the spires there’s blood there’s soil there are generations

Old School free range eggs honesty box
pass the feather

let’s always share Empty for Depot

At the foot of the proposal bridge the path meanders

At the second time of asking it was agreed

despite information and the essentialness of cable laying

during the boiling of clouds and chimney smoke on a cold day

you arrived and secretly I knew that light would be altered

shapes would shift along the shore and evening platforms would provide desired reunions before trains return empty to the depot Stickers on Notebooks

like clear skies
    that turn to cloud
it is necessity

dig through sand seek lines make camp

verge offers opportunity West Coast Mainline

shortening days leaf silhouettes against roofs

picnic near parks picnic in motorway service areas Station

four tracks two fast
two slow

Island platforms
unmanned after two p.m.

East Coast
Mainline

north to Scotland
south to London

we are somewhere in-between

watching leaves twist in the fast train
wake Blue String

seals the bag
contents slightly damp

ey they will eventually burn
despite rain
a clear view

she played on sand
summer past

grains shift

but love stays
the same

she wants snow
to build shelters
Snow Castles

There is beauty in the steam pipe
It is somebody’s magic place a solitary walk

among distant breakers

will avoid the crescent queue

Unpack the bags carry the tree the badge will be nestling the coincidence of image will startle

A Mast Year

Despite the wind
it is impossible to fly the kite

She runs along the concrete path
that’s been there

forty years

Though the orchard is reduced to one tree the windfalls

mount up

they will make a delicious pie

The kite folds neatly away to be stowed
until we meet

during the remnants of the next storm
Medium Wave

Green retreat
along the canal

berries gathered
sugar to sweeten

a starred cardigan
first play

first two added don’t let them rot on the vine beacon of return with it drops the mist

at junction
curve sweeps the river
follows the line south end reflected slightly just enough to know

it is there
