Preface

How to accept
this drift

the move    not mapped nor clear other than in its existence

a year passed
I think of you
it's early on a sunny morning in June and think of your thinking of me possible

How do we live with this?
yet live with this

What have we left
from all this?

‘Concepts promise protection from experience.

                    The spirit does not dwell in concepts. Oh Jung.’

                    (Joanne Kyger – Desecheo Notebook)

two years passed    ‘Oh Jung’ the cycle not repeated
only the insistence

The story is that, when a child, Borges used to come to his father. His father would have a number of coins that he would place on his desk one by one, one on top of the other. To be brief – the stack of coins is an image of how our memory distorts and simplifies events the farther we move from them. The first coin is the actual event, the next coin is the event recreated in the mind, the memory, the next coin is a recreation of the first recreation, etc., etc.,...

But what of the essence of this? 'Oh Jung's' insistences. The Sufi story of the famous River that tried to cross the desert, but only crossed the sands as water 'in the arms of the wind', nameless but

Book One

the soft dawn            it's light I mean your body        and how I ache now yes, tremble

the words?            how can they...

somehow the raven flying through endless skies that ache too much      the unbearable distance borne

Across the valley the sun catches the white silos of these scattered farms
Up on the ridge

I mean following the creek...

As we lie in each other dazed and hanging like birds on the wind your body, yes        I'm talking about it at last            I mean this is the discovery Need I list the items?

On your way from the thorn tree to the house you stop and half turn to tell me...
that doesn't matter
but your look
and this picture I have and at this distance

I have this now
I have what I have in my hands

dawn – light – body – words – raven – skies – ache – distance – valley – sun – silos – farms – ridge – creek – each other – birds – wind

Book Two

Baseball in Central Park.

Anti-war parade on 5th Avenue.

The Egyptian rooms in the Metropolitan.

Reading Gide's Journals in my room.

On the bus : the green Catskills. large black birds standing in the grass.
wild blue iris in the swamps. two woodchucks. two rabbits. If other men's shoes fit, wear 'em.

We swim naked in the pool at night. The stars so bright. The hot night, the crickets and frogs singing. I hold you to me in a small room – the night air so heavy. Inside 'the dream' ...

A farm dog barks somewhere across the valley.

The bright greens of the woods, the sun streaming down through the branches. The crashings of a chicken hawk suddenly startled and flying up through the branches to the safety of the sky again. The rain that increases and

thunder in the distance the air heavy
and the valley white with mist

our bodies wet
