Sur\textit{(rendering)}

SAMPLER
Mario Martín Gijón

Sur(rendering)

translated from Spanish by Terence Dooley

Shearsman Books
Love Games

Mario Martín Gijón’s (Sur)rendering is a sequence of short passionate lyrics describing a love lost and found. This might sound like nothing new in the history of poetry, but the poet immerses us in his story by a complex process of linguistic recreation: recreation in the sense of re-invention and recreation also as play, or playfulness.

Eduardo Moga explains his method: “The poetry of Mario Martín Gijón is characterised by a morphological promiscuity which springs from an intense awareness of the susceptibility of language to experiment. Words become lexical clay in the hands of the poet, or articulated entities into which other words may be telescoped. Words break, unscrew, crumble onto the page like sand. They are like scattered pieces of a mosaic reassembled to form a new puzzle. This is done by the insertion of brackets around letters, slashes allowing a choice between letters, dashes severing or connecting syllables, suffixes or prefixes belonging equally to the words surrounding them. It multiplies the ways in which a phrase can be read, multiplies its potential simultaneous meanings.” So the poet is able to juggle the memory of pleasure with present suffering, joy and pain in a single verse: (pre/es/ab) sence. Ambiguity striving for synchronicity, the language of love becoming as fraught with contradiction as love itself.

Translating Mario Martín Gijón involves being faithful to his meanings while completely displacing and reconstructing his effects. Words must be found in English (often elsewhere in the poem) capable of the dislocations and relocations, the Russian doll/Rubik cube effect, his method demands. The strange harmony and beauty of his lyric voice must also be reproduced. I hope I have done so.

Terence Dooley
Abrazo: única luz.
De nuestros cuerpos brota.

—Juan Rejano

Abtrünnig erst bin ich treu.

—Paul Celan
Embrace: single light.
It springs from our bodies.

—Juan Rejano

Apostate only am I true.

—Paul Celan
(trans. John Felstiner)
I

SAMPLER
origen de la imagen de la gema
de tu rostro
  en el sueño
se acercaba cercado de certezas (es un sueño no es real despertaré) cernida por el cierzo de esa noche te alejaste al ritmo de mis párpados origin of the image of the jewel

of your face
   in dream loomed closer closed and definite

(it is a dream it isn’t real you woke) sifted by the north wind of that night you left to the beat of my eye-lids el averno de no ver

tes
el callado son de tu son risa
la gozosa caída de tus pasos tan bella tu labrar mis palabras en silencio el templado mar de tu mirada con templada luz navegando el tiempo de mis ojos toda esta carencia endurece los muros de mi in(v/f)ierno Avernus, unsoundable pit—of never seeing you

hearing the mute
welcome of your smile
the joyful footfall of you so beautiful

your silent sewing of my words the temperate sea I see in your contemplative eye sailing the (h)our of my light all this without-ness cementing the walls of my winter-hell la promesa de me-d(ec)irte hasta tu me dio

fuerza esperanzada para seguir apalabrandola labranza trazando los surcos

de tu cuerpo ausente repartiendo semilla
en la tierra baldía
the promise of (as)saying you s(u/e)rv(ey)ing you gave me hope and strength to giving my word ploughed following the furrows of your abs(c)ent

sowing seed
on barren land
la gota que colma el vaso

necio nací y cie
    go té
    án
do me

a otro día atrabiliario de bilis sin tu sal iva

a donde nadie ni dioses nada me dieran otro día de espera y doyme a los diablos tap dripping

bad was I born and blind—ly 
go

drib—
bling
down
a drain

to bilious days without your swe(e/a)t rain

your sal[i]v(e/a)

where no-one no angel
dangle

hopeful day and I go to the devil
soy planta que se seca sin la savia del sabor sabio de tus besos mis dedos tallos que se quiebran sin tu susurro de piel

sin-copa-da
des prendida

entre las sábanas I am a withered plant without the wise juice of your kiss my fingers broken stems without the whisper of your s(y/i)n– copated skin
depr(i/a)ved
within these sheets
reloj interno

sanguinaria arena la del tiempo que cae por mis venas en tu ausencia saja la aguja la carne de las horas adversas de mi extraviado reloj oculto imán orientado hacia ti internal clock

de the bloodstained sand of time falls through my veins when you are gone the hands rip open the flesh of inimical hours on my lost clock hidden magnet pointing towards you sacrificio sin fe aterrado de tierra sin tus huellas caminé hoy por las afueras de tu nombre

el aire traía un olor a quema-do enervado sacrifiqué en el ara de tu ausencia de los cielos

¿propiciatorios?
burnt offering

terrified by terrain untrodden by you I wandered through the suburbs of your name

the irate air
bore embers of scorched pain weak I sacrificed
on the altar
of your absence

from heaven

in propitiation?