My verse is the true image of my Mind, Ever in motion, still desiring change;
And as thus to variety inclin’d, So in all Humors sportively I range:
      My muse is rightly of the English straine, That cannot long one fashion intertaine.
     —Michael Drayton

Era il giorno ch'al sol si scoloraro per la pietà del suo factore i rai, quando i' fui preso, et non me ne guardai, ché i be' vostr'occhi, donna, mi legaro.

Tempo non mi parea da far riparo contra colpi d'Amor: però m'andai secur, senza sospetto; onde i miei guai nel commune dolor s'incominciaro.

Trovommi Amor del tutto disarmato et aperta la via per gli occhi al core, che di lagrime son fatti uscio et varco:

però al mio parer, non li fu honore ferir me de saetta in quello stato, a voi armata non mostrar pur l'arco.
Era il giorno ch’al sol si scoloraro

That pitiful morning when the light of Heaven Was hidden for our mourning maker’s sake, I saw you first that day, My Lady, but Was captured, disarmed, then bound to your stake.

It didn’t seem the time for shields and armour Against Love’s arrows, his batters and blows; So, unsuspecting, I wept with the world, But that day my heartbreaks began, my woes.

Love stalked me, found me, unarmed and weak, And opened my eyes, portals of tears, through which Sorrow flowed from the passage of my heart.

But feeble was Love’s triumph to triumph With his arrow over one so enfeebled, And to not even dare to flash you his dart.
Iron Maiden

Latex skies. Low cloud obscuring celestial domination. I clapped my fuck-eye on you, which you then pierced on a glance, that day, and dragged me naked to your torture chamber.

The funeral of Thatcher seemed the right time for your whip and irons. Posties brushed up their MaggieMaggieMaggie chants and I cried onions-onions-onions-onions, stinging eyes fixed on your heels.

You stalked me in your lace-up stockings, striding tight, and took my tears for real pain, yet can’t you see desire burning under the dildo mask you’ve clamped on my kisser?

Easy prey for your domination, bitch! Slap! I crumple to the floor. Would rubbery Love through his pouch dare to flash you his horn?
Up at dawn (though it was the Shortest Day), He was nursing a Mad Friday hangover, But took me on walkies to Seffie. He took a selfie By the Palm House. Tied to the gate I first saw you.

It was Brass Monkeys, believe me. Licking my bollocks Was like snuffling dropped ice cream dollops;
The men in their flashing Santa hats looked lugubrious But the depth of my despair exceeded their Christmas Blues!

Your wet nose sniffled my arse and I growled and howled Like a stud-dog. I slobbered and chafed at my chains.
He kicked me and my jaws locked on my bilious yelp.

You lifted your tail like a poodle, fluffy tart, Tripping past my flailing mass of muscle and lust.
He didn’t even notice, phone in hand, boot in my nuts.
Petrak: the first English sonnet, Good Friday 1401

The morwe biganne when hevene its bemes In routhe of our Lord hid al the lighte.
My Lady I espeyde, she rent al my dremes, This wight bounden to wommens tendre myghte.

It was nat the tyme for speres sharp and stronge Agan arwes of Love and his strook and smoot.
Withouten sheeldes or defence I wep ful longe swich a love-longyne's desperaunce, as I woot.

Love cam russyng to smerte my peynes sorwe Fro the breething prisoun of my distempre hert, To open myn eyen and resolven the flo.

Love’s dominacion is yet deedly narwe Yif I am so wrecche, wounden bi a dart Whil you, unbuxomnesse Lady, escap his bow.
A Florentine Vampire in Paris

Amid the rush of All Souls’ Eve, the majesty of sadness (I’d waited 530 years for this translation, this transfusion) a woman mourned, passing slowly, lifted by the liquefaction of her clothes; holding fast the stake to my bloated heart.

Like a wobbling lush, not feeling blows or blood, Under a livid sky of germs I fed off her grace, statuesque. I wept, drank deep from her softening eyes.

I’ve paid in blood but not my own, nor my words.
Love flashed and she flooded, ensanguined and weak: bleak eternity escaped into the void vessel of her heart.

Ever! There’s no living beat in this unloving verse: O you whom I might have loved if I’d dared not to flash you my fangs! O you who’d read it all before!
Semantic Poetry Translation to the memory of Stefan Themerson

In that first part of the day holding all that can be contained having copious feeling for the sufferings and misfortunes of others when the agency by which objects are rendered visible by electromagnetic radiation capable of producing visual sensation in the vault of sky overhanging the earth the dwelling place of God or the gods and the blessèd was concealed on account of the one who makes namely the Creator who murmured in a sorrowful manner as in grief
I perceived by the sense seated in the eye you for the foremost occasion regarded as one of a number of multiplied instances in a recurring series on that particular holy time the anniversary of the death of the son of God that the earth takes to revolve on its axis O woman of refined manners and instincts of chivalric devotion belonging to me but I was taken by force as a prize stripped of armour rendered defenceless deprived of the power of hurt before being restrained then fastened with a band to your post to which one condemned to be burned is tied It did not appear to be the moment at which to entertain broad plates carried to ward off weapons and defensive dress to protect me from straight pointed missiles made to be shot from a bow or beatings with successive blows or strokes or knocks belonging to or pertaining to or deriving from the devoted affection or sexual love for someone (else) or the personification of the devoted affection or sexual love for someone (else) as the deity of the devoted affection or sexual love for someone (else) namely Cupid or Eros so having no inclination to believe without sufficient evidence I lamented by leaking
    drops of liquid secreted by the lachrymal gland in concordance with the system of things which accommodates the inhabitants of this universe but at that moment of existence the crushing sorrows or miseries that belong to myself alone arose and came into being

Eros or Cupid came after me keeping under cover succeeded in tracking down me who was not furnished with means of protection who was wanting strength or mental or moral or artistic force and he exposed the interior of my organ of sight or vision its great gate or magnificent gress for
drops of liquid secreted by the lachrymal gland from end to end as abundant pain of mind seeped from the transitional tubes of the imagined seat of my affections

But the exultation at the success of the deity of the devoted affection or sexual love for someone (else) was forceless vacillating faint in its celebration of victory with pomp not even bold enough to venture to make show in a blaze of brilliant sparkles of his pointed weapon or toy for throwing with the hand or of a calcareous needle supposed to be used as a sexual stimulus by snails
