Acknowledgments

Some of these poems appeared in print in Masthead (Australia), Shearsman (England), Southword (Cork), SVP Magazine (England), Talisman (U.S.A.), The Gig (Canada), The Irish Review, The Irish Times, and The Recorder (U.S.A.), via the net in A Chides Alphabet, and on the web in ND[re]VIEW, The Alsop Review, and The Alterran Poetry Assemblage; I would like to thank the editors responsible.

The range of my indebtedness may be gathered from the dedications associated with many of the poems. In addition to those, however, I want especially to thank Michael Smith and Randolph Healy, my editors at New Writers' Press and Wild Honey Press, respectively, for a personal and poetic commitment way in excess of that function. Alex Davis and George Hitching also gave support when it was needed, and it was needed.

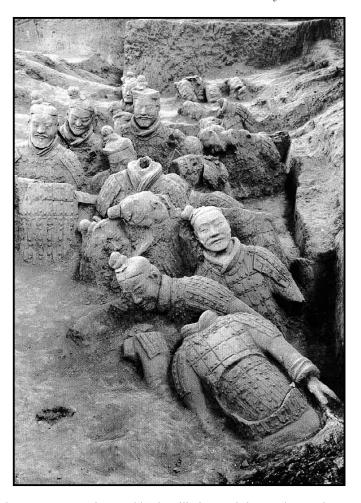

My greatest and most particular gratitude, however, is to Angela Conner, whose care saw this into a book, and so it is, finally,

for Angela

stone floods

(1995)

these are for Nora my durable dam

Dragons and fish see water as a palace, and it's just like human beings seeing a palace. They don't know it flows. If someone says "this palace you see is running water," the dragons and fish will be astonished, the way we are when we hear that "mountains flow". Still, there may be some dragons and fish who understand that the columns and pillars of palaces and pavilions are flowing water.

Dogen, Mountains and Waters Sutra

Rocks turn to rivers, rivers turn to men.

Robert Herrick

The Opening

for P.C.

You are reading this book On the table are letters a mirror some flowers from which a leaf falls down Behind is a wall in which there is no door but you have opened it and gone through

You hear these words
Your shadow moves across some photographs a leaf the threshold which is badly worn Beneath is the floor in which there is no chasm yet you have stumbled and dropped through

I have shut the book and there is silence here Now by the window I look to the night which has begun to fall which will not be long now

Fast Rivers

for Michael Smith

right at the very instant of delivery the messengers begin to fail and are already exhausted

when we see the moment so instantaneously spent reckoning surely we regard time not yet come extinct let not the fool delude himself that which he foresees will last no longer than the bygone show and all things thus shall pass

our lives are fast rivers soon delivered to the sea of death whereto go all dominions down exhausted and are quenched there must find the slightest rill with tributary stream and flood all then levelled utterly daylabourer and lord

this world is but a road to one wherein is no abiding grief

he needs due bearing who would not from that true path fall off the setting out is at our birth we travel as we live dying

at last complete the course and in that death lie down

The Turlough

for Celestine

It is raining elsewhere

Vertical rivers reverse stone floods the karst domain each sink turns source

Rock brings forth fruit elsewhere

The action of the clock runs down through fissured hours wells up lost time

All is not lost elsewhere

The emigrant returns old loves reach out their arms gold leaves fly up

Time heals all wounds elsewhere

Bullet returns fire from flesh to gun the dried stain weeps bone knits again

No mark gets the cold deck elsewhere

Boxed by his court of spades Jack wakes from his stone watch that springs each arch London Bridge is falling down elsewhere

Circuits and gates collapse in sand the face the glass composed breaks down

Raw head finds bloody bones elsewhere

Vast hands stop at the stretch knuckle of blazing gas and wrist of stars

The gods explode this turn elsewhere

Red giant and white dwarf come in in a blue shift Venus meets Mars

There is thunder now elsewhere

Under an incandescent sky flash floods spread out this lake is on no map

Strands

for P.C.

I have come indoors Nothing moves outside but the sea in these drowned valleys disassembling its past

If there is dark fruit forming the roots will run deep in this rich earth the growing timbers branch through your night dreams

I have shut the door The air outside is harsh where the sea broadcasts sharp seed over a moon of salt

If there are metals ripening that corn will bend to this slow storm that new bread rise through your unrecognized intents

I have opened this book because elsewhere there is only the sigh of tall cliffs shod with sand walking into the sea

If there are things intended those strands will reach beyond this time those vestiges extend through your disquietude Uncertain fingers now dissect from the transformed wave stone fish They spin and sink The sand receives them

Verses with a Refrain from a Solicitor's Letter

for George Hitching

As when a faded lock of woman's hair shall cause a man to cut his throat in a bedroom at five o'clock in the morning; or when Albany resounds with legislation, but a little henpecked judge in a dusty office at Herkimer or Johnstown sadly writes across the page the word 'unconstitutional' – the glory of the Capitol has faded.

Benj. Paul Blood

Dear Sir, I was this morning straight after the news and forecast hanging from an old appletree in my garden a small Japanese bell when I received through the post your importunate and quite misguided threats

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

An injunction, you say. An obstruction, you say. You've a lot of chat for someone that's not even clear who he's talking to.

Does this help: not only have I not erected any obstruction in the form of a barbed wire fence or otherwise

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

but I'm attempting today to rest and recover from the effects of an obstruction in my own passages? I have, it pains me to have to spit it out, a strangury, and you've got the wrong man, chief, I've better blockages to worry about than the one at the back of some godforsaken hotel in Midleton

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

What's more, my bell is mute.

The inscribed slip that made its tongue chime in the wind, flew off. It's not my day.

Far from putting up barbed wire fences,

I'd prefer, right now, to see one of those bright Byzantine Christs come striding across from the opposite hills

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

fresh from baptizing Adam, vast and very masterful, lugging a patriarch along with each arm no doubt from some new-harrowed hell and scattering from his feet a fine debris of locks, bolts, spancels, cuffs, gyves, fetters, stocks, and other miscellaneous hindrances

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

And what would our Neighbourhood Watch do then? Put the polis on his tail, stay home, and watch that hooligan as he'd come, breaking contracts, flattening fences and leaving gates and prisons open behind him. Yes, he's the man would soon break down the calculus that stopped my flow

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

And not like a thief in the night, but openly I'd have him eliminate all limitations, peel walls and roofs away like rind and with his knife of stars reveal what soft exotic fruit grew ripe within

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

unchain Prometheus from his rock to stretch and scratch at last and fire stones at that bloody bird, allow Eurydice ascend to feel the strange dew fall chill through her faded dress

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence remove the ratchet from the clock, North from the needle, run the many down to one. (Oh no, hold on there, God, we can't have that!

I won't be one with our friend the illicit erector of barbed wire barricades, or this damned notary. Cut!)

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

It's evening now. The bell's transformed. With a laurel leaf lashed to its tongue it cries out clear in the wind. I'll just sit tight till the Ipral sets me up and I no longer pass blood, or feel weak when I attempt to stand

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

take idle note of that shrill song:
past flight and hot pursuit terror passing cold restraint to come then when I'm up to it again, forgetfully, turn that stock still.
I trust this terminates our correspondence, Sir

and in this regard time shall be made of the essence

Cold Snap

Hammers of ice strike through the chiming earth. Quartz and felspar writhe and tear. Oppressed by frost the glistening mica weeps, while mineral centuries shatter and sift to a quick sand.

Watch the high pines glint on a coal ground and the windfall stonefruit wait. Wrenbones fake iguanodon, invert the fossil record into air. Among these simultaneous ages houseless, desolate, dark forms slide, (glazed the clear dew of their gaze) observe it is a bitter season, that it cannot last. But if there be anywhere some heat it is remote. Through such white measures heart in mouth we pass, fearful of landslips, tremors, or the seismic shock would fault the brittle light. Wordbreath ghosts these galleries.

Lines in Fall

I Bag of bones cant lie down to night timbers settling crack them up right under Orrery Hill > head waters run bone dry springs stop fall rains fill up resurgent courses where the flood divides the fabric all washed up gives way to thread bare ribs remnant the wave un weaves in ropes of sand the loose ends ravel out until the form breaks down its raw material and nothing else survives this cataract cuts off all lines into the past the old tissue far too slight to stand that fall II the face turns stone ground in the fall moon cold peregrine in transit fret to bits

where a hard rain picks this dream to shreds a sharp wind in the easts grip combs bones straight that head long home ward warp from the well dressed frame falls as the sand sifts down silts up groundless fears stop then now that yarns spun out the flocks blown far afield from tenters bare ruined wires run way beyond these lines night weaves new cloth the moon her shuttle

Parting Words

If there's going to be a general resurrection count me out

I wouldn't want that over again not even the good bits repetition would sour them the rancid cud sicken me but if in the final assembly some indefatigable godhead twists my arm then purged of memory

I'll take the part of water reaching down through the lodged earth or light exact oblique at the delicate junctures or a hand touching and touching and touching

Cold Course

The jaded sun lies low in his halt galaxy, set hard like honey in the stiff comb, with house and planet, tree and shivering peregrine, all subjects under him consepulchred, underfoot and done for, a mere smoke of stars. The August heat, geometry of dance, full wilt and fall: all yet survive in the slow sugars; so, he now sits throned in dust, holds vestiges and memoranda for his court, whose armies dominate their night quicksilver courses irrigate. These he thought measures to kill time and grief. Gorged on vermilion, his peers sweated bright death, transfused the rockveins to their own. The sovereign they bolted down still circulates through this enchanted fastness of white sudden stone.

Coumeenole

for Owen

Dig! you cried

We dug out great trenches and extended the abyss down into an utter darkness that stopped the heart with its cold

We fought off monstrous beasts that nudged and butted us with their blunt heads and from those regions of terror we brought back massive rocks and curious shells

We threw up huge walls and ramparts to repel the encroaching forces of chaos and disorder

We took all the boulders and all the sand in the world and ranged up mountains into the clouds against the combing winds and the hard sea

And in the territories we had created we established order we set up high towers rivetted with light and we built roads castles and cities

At evening as we left looked back and saw whole continents dissolve under the flood and heard the soft collapse of walls and boundaries

you cried

Tocharian Music

for Máire Herbert

In these mountains there is a stream which flows away drop by drop, producing a sound as of music; once a year, at a certain date, these sounds are collected and made into a musical tune. Wu Kung

Still the jade woman circulates the cup its empty now

Too long interbred with dragons they grew restive and rebelled against the imperial mandate

Eleven thousand died in the reprisal and the city laid waste the airs dispersed only the names survive

Time slipped out of their tablature and without stopping fled fugitive amongst those sands
