Jared Abbrederis is a Wisconsin native, who played football with the Wisconsin Badgers, Green Bay Packers, and Detroit Lions.

He was born in West Allis in 1990. He attended Wautoma High School where he played numerous positions on the football field.

Although Jared is known for being wide receiver, he actually played quarterback and defensive back in high school. He finished with a 4.19 GPA, which allowed him to get into UW-Madison.

He was a walk-on for the Badgers as a quarterback. He made the shift to receiver and throughout his career with the Badgers, he became one of the best receivers to ever play there.

He holds the record for most receptions in a season and shares the record for most receptions in a career.

Jared was drafted by his home state Green Bay Packers in 2014. He spent three seasons in Green Bay. Injuries sidelined much of his career. His fourth season in the NFL was with the Detroit Lions. After one season with Detroit, he retired and moved his family right back to Wisconsin.

Jared now works with Thrivent Financial and is working on expanding his S.O.W. Foundation to help people in need. The program currently helps Waushara County and the surrounding counties, but the plan is to eventually to expand to help the entire state of Wisconsin.
