

Grieving During a Pandemic: Tools to Utilize During Covid

So much has changed since COVID-19 disrupted our everyday lives, and our community has rallied to find different but meaningful ways to try to reduce the isolation of grieving during a pandemic.

Greg King, Director of Grief Support & Community Education and Funeral Director, shares with us his thoughts on finding new and healthy ways to work through the grief process. He also reflects on how far we have come in just a few months, in terms of utilizing technology to help. Read More

The families that Sol Levinson & Bros. has served since the beginning of the pandemic have not been able to sit, grieve, and pray together as an in-person community in the traditional, therapeutic manner in which we have historically sought comfort.

To help families grieve in these unusual times, we invite you to a virtual community-wide memorial service on Thursday, September 10th at 7pm.

The memorial will include prayers and rituals led by clergy from local synagogues, followed by a program offering strategies for coping with loss and grief during the Jewish High Holidays.

You are welcome to join for all or part of this gathering. Please see our blog post for full details and important links.

ADDICTION DURING RESTRICTION

Families Navigating Recovery in the Time of COVID-19
