Environmental education is a stepping stone on the path to a sustainable future

Make Climate a Class

Environmental education in every course, no matter the subject

A map of the United States is shown, densely populated with hundreds of colorful pushpins in various colors including red, blue, green, yellow, and black. The pushpins are scattered across the entire country, with a higher concentration in the eastern half. In the background, a person's hands are visible, reaching towards the map. The map includes labels for 'UNITED STATES', 'CALIFORNIA', 'GULF OF MEXICO', and 'GUATEMALA'.

THE CAMPUS CLIMATE PROJECT

Mapping university climate contributions and advocating for more

Add your voice to The Campus Climate Project

1 Submit your answer to The Campus Climate Project map

Tell us if your university is doing enough to fight climate change! Contribute to the map of university climate contributions in 2020. This data will be helpful in step 2.

2 Advocate for stronger commitments from your college or university.

Once you submit your answer on the map, you will get more information on next steps.

3 Share with your friends!

To create a powerful Campus Climate map, we need as much data as possible. Share this page with your peers and post on social media.
