

Nordonia Dental Group is Proud to Introduce Dr. Patrick Sovacool

Patrick Sovacool earned his Bachelor of Arts degree from Miami University in Zoology in 2009, where he was a scholarship athlete in track and field. He continued his education at The Ohio State University and graduated with his Doctorate in Dental Surgery in 2013.

Originally from the near west side of Cleveland, his interest in the dental field began during his years at St. Ignatius High School. Dr. Pat's cross-country coach is a practicing dentist who introduced him to the profession. He says, "I was drawn to a profession that prides itself on helping people, while offering a profound opportunity to escape life behind a desk."

Dr. Sovacool stays current in the field of dentistry through continuing education and as a member of many professional dental associations. He has taken courses in endodontics and implantology, and is a member of the American Dental Association, Cleveland Dental Society, and has served as a president of the Western Ohio Dental Society in 2015.

In his spare time, Dr. Sovacool spent time volunteering with The Compassionate Care Clinic in Shelby County, Ohio, and with Give Kids a Smile, a nonprofit organization that provides free dental care and education for underserved children, from 2013-2015. While competing for the Miami Redhawks on the track, he was featured in Sports Illustrated's "Faces in the Crowd" in October of 2007.

Outside of work, Dr. Sovacool enjoys spending time with his wife, Kori, a nurse at University Hospitals. An avid runner, golfer and skier, Dr. Pat also enjoys traveling to country music festivals and cheering on the Ohio State Buckeyes.

Dr. Sovacool will assume practicing at Nordonia Dental Group starting March 2, 2017. He is looking forward to meeting you and your entire family.
