

Erik Reitmayr, Sales Professional

Erik is a Long Island native who aims to bring his solar energy expertise into the homes of his clients, and his community. He maximizes saving potential by considering the client's individual needs to accommodate them in the most beneficial manner. It's only right that he treats each of his clients the same way he would treat his neighbors, or his childhood friends, because to him they are exactly that.

Since graduating from CW Post, he has been working in the renewable energy industry for three years, during which he has managed sales teams in Nassau County and New York City. Having lived in Long Island his entire life, he is familiar with the community and the expansion of solar energy in the area. It is this experience that helps Erik develop custom made solutions for his clients through a one-on-one approach.

When he isn't expanding renewable energy on Long Island and the surrounding boroughs, Erik enjoys being outdoors. He even received an athletic scholarship in college for football, and played on the "All Long Island" football and lacrosse teams.
