

End-of-life care

This one-day course aims to highlight the importance of delivering person-centred support during the end-of-life period and to enable social care workers to provide care that supports the whole person rather than just their physical needs.

Learning outcomes

- Be able to provide support to individuals and key people during end-of-life care.
- Understand factors affecting end-of-life care.
- Be able to support family members following the death of an individual.
- Be able to manage own feelings in relation to the dying or death of individuals.

This course can be redesigned and tailored to meet your specific requirements.
