Dear Colleague:

Welcome to APA 2019 in Chicago! We’re so glad you’ve joined us! While there is so much to see, do, and taste in Chicago, we hope you take full advantage of the wonderful program and networking opportunities this annual meeting provides.

And part of that is jumping into the outstanding opportunities that the Society for the Psychology of Religion and Spirituality (Division 36) affords participants. Drs. Kevin Harris and David Rosmarin have put together an exceptional program for our Division, with something for researchers, educators, practitioners, and students. Thanks to those of you who are sharing your work with us! Please make it a priority to attend presentations sponsored by Division 36 and support the work of our colleagues. Schedule time to visit our hospitality suite and get to know others in the division better and join in the conversations and discussions that will occur there. These are often some of the richest times at a conference like this, and lead to professional relationships that enhance our networks and the overall work of our field.

As you mingle, be sure to invite others to join our Division and contribute to and benefit from the psychology of religion and spirituality.

Finally, your company is desired at our social hour on Friday night. Good food, drink, and most of all companionship await.

I hope that when you return home, you have learned much, met new people from all walks of psychology, stimulated new thinking to further our work, and maybe even found collaborators for new projects as you continue your important work in research and practice.

So, savor Chicago, and indulge in our superb program and networking opportunities. I hope to meet you personally!

Kind regards,

Tim Sisemore, President

Kevin Harris, Program Chair

David Rosarin, Co-Chair

“The Society for the Psychology of Religion and Spirituality is a division of the American Psychological Association that promotes psychological theory, research and clinical practice to understand the significance of religion and spirituality in people’s lives and in the discipline of psychology. The society facilitates the interchange of ideas between science and clinical practice and seeks through its activities to increase public awareness of psychological dimensions of religion and spirituality. The society is nonsectarian and does not espouse or endorse any particular religious positions or beliefs. It welcomes psychologists and others from around the world interested in the psychology of religion and spirituality.”

Symposium: Religious Beliefs and Well-Being – Belief Certainty, Beliefs About Suffering, and Belief in Science
8/08/2019 Thursday 8:00 AM - 8:50 AM McCormick Place Room W176b
Co-Listing Divisions 17, 34
Cochairs: Crystal L. Park, PhD, University of Connecticut; Lauren M. Carney, BA, University of Connecticut
Religious beliefs are an understudied yet important aspect of religiousness. We will examine relationships between religious beliefs and the wide range of potential associations beliefs may have with different aspects of well-being:

- Religious Belief Certainty and Well-Being in Religious and Non-Religious Individuals – Lauren M. Carney, BA, University of Connecticut
- Beliefs About Suffering and Affective Spiritual Experiences in the Context of Life Stress – Amy Hale, PhD, Boston Children's Hospital, Boston, MA
- Scientific Versus Religious Belief and Indicators of Emotional Well-Being – Anondah R. Saide, PhD, University of North Texas

Discussant: Crystal L. Park, PhD, University of Connecticut

Symposium: Humility in the Context of Religion and Spirituality
8/08/2019 Thursday 9:00 AM - 9:50 AM McCormick Place Room W182
Chair: Peter C. Hill, PhD, Rosemead School of Psych., Biola University
Though humility is culturally grounded in many of the worlds religious traditions, such grounding has been largely disregarded in research. The purpose of this symposium is to consider humility in the context of religiousness and spirituality.

- Glad Intellectual Dependence on God: A Theistic Account of Intellectual Humility – M. Elizabeth L. Hall, PhD, Rosemead School of Psych., Biola University; Peter C. Hill, PhD, Rosemead School of Psych., Biola University; Kent Dunnington, PhD, Biola University; David C. Wang, PhD, Rosemead School of Psych., Biola University
- A Meta-Analysis on the Benefits of Intellectual Humility – Sarah E. Gazaway, MA, Georgia State University; Stacey E. McElroy-Heltzel, PhD, Georgia State University; Joshua N. Hook, PhD, University of North Texas; Don Davis, PhD, Georgia State University
- General and Intellectual Humility as Predictors of Well-Being Among Religious Leaders – Peter Jankowski, PhD, Bethel University; Steven Sandage, PhD, Boston University; Chance A. Bell, PhD, Boston University; Elizabeth G. Ruffing, MTS, MA, Boston University; Chris Adams, PhD, Azusa Pacific University
- Intellectual Humility in Religious/Spiritual and Humanitarian Aid Contexts – Ward B. Davis, PsyD, Wheaton College; Jamie D. Aten, PhD, Wheaton College; Laura Shannonhouse, PhD, Georgia State University; Daryl R. Van Tongeren, PhD, Hope College; David C. Wang, PhD, Rosemead School of Psych., Biola University; M. Elizabeth L. Hall, PhD, Rosemead School of Psych., Biola University; Leif Van Grinsven, BA, Wheaton College; Kent Annan, MA, Wheaton College
Symposium: Atheist Research in Psychology – Current Trends and Future Directions
8/08/2019 Thursday 10:00 AM - 10:50 AM McCormick Place Room W186a
Co-Listing Divisions 17, 32
Chair: Jacob S. Sawyer, PhD, Penn State Mont Alto
This discussion will focus on experiences related to atheists of color, atheist community groups and social supports, and atheist reactions to death. Implications for research and practice will be discussed for each.

- Forever Bowling Alone: Community, Life Satisfaction, and Self-Esteem for Atheist People – Melanie E. Brewster, PhD, Teachers College, Columbia University; Jacob S. Sawyer, PhD, Penn State Mont Alto, Melissa M. Ertl, BA, University at Albany – State University of New York, Albany, NY
- Death Anxiety and Death Acceptance in Nonbelievers – Jacob S. Sawyer, PhD, Penn State Mont Alto, Mont Alto, PA; Melanie E. Brewster, PhD, Teachers College, Columbia University; Melissa M. Ertl, BA, University at Albany – State University of New York
- Isn’t Atheism a White Thing? Centering the Voices of Atheists of Color – Dena M. Abbott, PhD, Louisiana Tech University; Debra Mollen, PhD, Texas Womans University; Caitlin Mercier, BS, Louisiana Tech University; Elyxcus J. Anaya, BS, Louisiana Tech University; Victoria A. Rukus, MEd, Louisiana Tech University
Discussant: Joseph H. Hammer, PhD, University of Kentucky

Symposium: Multicultural Spirituality Assessment – Implications for Aging, Trauma, and Existential Challenges
8/08/2019 Thursday 11:00 AM - 12:50 PM, McCormick Place Room W185d
Co-Listing Divisions 20, 29, 56
Chair: Amy L. Ai, PhD, Florida State University
In the midst of global challenges (e.g., existential challenges due to aging populations, regional conflicts, and natural disasters), this symposium provides instruments assessing diverse spirituality with properties and practical implications.

- Reverence in Religious and Secular Contexts (RRSC): A Positive Emotion Linked With Health/Well-Being – Paul Wink, PhD, Wellesley College
- Applying a Positive Mindset of Spiritual Jihad to Religious/Spiritual Struggles: A Preliminary Study – Seyma N. Saritoprak, MA, Case Western Reserve University
- The Perceived Spiritual Support Scale (PSSS): Assessing Support of Deeply Connected Diverse Entities – Amy L. Ai, PhD, Florida State University
- Measuring Mindfulness Grounded in the Original Buddhas Discourses on Meditation Practice – Qi Wang, PhD, University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong, China
- The Development of a Scale for Interfaith Spirituality: Implications for Trauma and Wellbeing – Ibrahim Kira, PhD, Georgia State University
- The Spiritual Well-Being Scale: Concept, Measure, Psychometrics and Utility in Cross-Cultural Views – Rodger Bufford, PhD, George Fox University
Discussant: Tina Savla, PhD, FSu, Boston, VT
