Dear Members of Congress,

The Covid-19 pandemic has presented America’s small businesses with unprecedented challenges, causing many to fail and the rest to scramble to survive by changing business models, moving online, offering deliveries and mores.

Resilience, creativity and hard work are defining characteristics of the American entrepreneur and many are finding ways to hang on. Yet, small business owners face a new and unexpected threat to their viability—ill-advised cuts to the United States Postal Service that are slowing down the delivery of mail, wreaking havoc with the normal course of business including late payments that create cash flow problems and narrowing the options for seeking new business opportunities to weather this crisis.

The Postal Service is a crucial institution that provides vital services to businesses in every community of the country. The reliable and affordable delivery of goods and payments to millions of customers and businesses are crucial to commerce and the health of our small business ecosystem.

Small businesses with fewer than 10 employees, the vast majority of all small businesses in the country, rely on the Postal Service more than any other delivery service due to its equitable pricing, affordability and—with 31,000 post offices in rural, urban and suburban communities—reach and accessibility. Undermining this valuable service through cost-cutting measures and unexpected rate hikes will cause self-inflicted economic wounds the government must avoid during a deep and damaging recession.

We call for the new postmaster general to halt and reverse harmful cost-cutting measures and we support legislation that would fully fund and protect the US Postal Service. The House of Representatives has passed legislation to repeal postal changes and invest $25 billion in the agency, and their colleagues in the Senate must follow suit immediately.

The Postal Service is a crucial pillar in the commerce of our country and is providing many small businesses a lifeline during this pandemic. We must keep the Postal Service strong and avoid placing more challenges in front of small business owners working hard to survive this once-in-a-generation crisis.
