Our goal at GISC is to help you achieve the results you are trying to accomplish. This is why our starting place is to understand what you want to achieve as a business. Only after we understand your business goals do we ask about the skills, knowledge, and mindset leaders need in order to achieve them. Understanding your unique business needs and leadership development needs serves as the foundation to the custom design process - whether it be a leadership development program, coaching engagement or organization change initiative.

We at GISC also understand that leadership development does not exist in a vacuum. If what is learned cannot be applied, then even the best designed program falls flat in terms of organizational impact. Our aim is to have a positive impact in your organization. We will therefore work with you to identify the work environment factors that need to be addressed in order to maximize your return on leadership development dollars.

Our faculty are world class and our programs are designed to go beyond building skills and knowledge to positively impacting how leaders become most fully themselves in the world.

Contact us for more details.