How to Pass a Bill in New Mexico

Each legislature lasts two years and has two constitutionally-mandated sessions. The first session lasts for 60 calendar days and occurs in odd-numbered years, convening in January. The second session is for 30 calendar days and occurs in even-numbered years. Bills in the second session are limited to fiscal matters, items specified by the governor and bills passed in the previous session that were vetoed by the governor. The governor can call a special session, as can the legislature with a three-fifths vote of both the Senate and House of Representatives. Members of the Senate are elected to four-year terms without term limits. Members of the House of Representatives are elected to two-year limits without term limits.

Bill Introduction

Regardless of how the legislature is convened, all bills follow the same path through the legislature. Any bill can be introduced in the Senate or House of Representatives—unlike the United States Congress, where only the House can introduce tax bills. The bill is assigned a number, read twice, printed, and referred to the proper committee.

Committee Reviews

Each bill is reviewed by one or more committees in the Senate and House of Representatives. The committees can approve the bill, amend it, substitute it, forward it to the next committee with no recommendation, or kill the bill by tabling it. Committee hearings are open to the public.

If a bill passes its committee hearings, it will be considered by the Senate or House of Representatives where it was introduced. The bill is placed on their calendar, which means it is formally scheduled for its third reading, and a final vote.

The Final Vote

If it passes, the bill moves to either the Senate or House of Representatives and repeats the entire process. If approved in the same form, it goes to the governor to be signed or vetoed. If the Senate or House of Representatives passes a different bill, they form a conference committee to work on a compromise. If the committee agrees on a compromise, the bill goes back to the Senate or House of Representatives for a final vote.

To the Governor's Desk

Bills that pass both the Senate and House of Representatives go to the governor to be signed or vetoed. They are formally prepared by either the Senate or House of Representatives where they originated, signed by the speaker of the House of Representatives and the president pro tempore of the Senate, and forwarded to the governor. The governor can sign the bill, making it law, veto it, or line-item veto it, if the bill contains an appropriation.

If the governor doesn't sign or veto a bill within three days—and if the legislature is still in session—it becomes law. If the legislature has adjourned, the governor has 20 days to sign bills. Unsigned bills are pocket vetoes.

The legislature can override the governor's veto with a two-thirds vote by the Senate or House of Representatives.

When a Signed Bill becomes Law

Signed bills typically become law 90 days after the legislature adjourns. However, the legislature can specify an emergency, which makes the bill effective when the governor signs it, or at a later date for the law to go into effect.

The Legislative Almanac

The Legislative Almanac is published by the New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperative Association. The Almanac is provided for free as a service of New Mexico's Rural Electric Cooperatives. It is our hope it will help and encourage citizens to participate in the legislative process.

New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperative Association

The New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperative Association provides legislative and educational services for its member cooperatives that deliver electric power to New Mexico's rural areas and small communities. The mission of the New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperative Association is to strengthen, support, unify, and represent Cooperative member interests at the local, state, and national levels. It also publishes enchantment Magazine, one of New Mexico's largest periodicals, and its only publication devoted exclusively to the people and events of rural New Mexico. Each cooperative has a representative on the association's board of directors, which controls the editorial content and advertising policy of enchantment through its Publications Committee.

Members of the New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperative Association

Over 211,000 New Mexican families and businesses own their electric cooperatives. They control the co-op's bylaws, vote on any significant changes in operations and elect trustees to direct co-op activities. Their cooperatives serve 80 percent of the land mass in New Mexico, from Chama in the north to the oil fields of the Permian Basin in the southeast; from the northeastern grasslands to the Bootheel desert.

There are 16 electric distribution cooperatives in New Mexico, 15 of which are members of the New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperative Association. The members have invested over $1.3 billion to provide reliable electric service to their members. They employ over 900 New Mexicans as linemen, customer service representatives, engineers, warehouse operators, and other positions.

The cooperatives are active in promoting and providing renewable energy resources and energy efficient rebate programs for consumer-members. They also offer a green power program to consumer-members who have the opportunity to purchase renewable energy.

The cooperatives strongly support their communities. They collectively operate one of the largest non-governmental scholarship programs in New Mexico. For example, the electric co-ops have provided over $11 million in higher educational scholarships to more than 8,000 New Mexico students over the past 20 years. They sponsor youth programs such as the Government-in-Action Youth Tour and provide safety training in local schools.

Ten of the 15 member distribution cooperatives receive wholesale power from Tri-State Generation and Transmission Association headquartered in Westminster, Colorado. Four are members of Western Farmers Electric Cooperative headquartered in Anadarko, Oklahoma; and one distribution cooperative receives power from an independent wholesale power supplier.

There are also three distribution cooperatives that are associate members of the New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperative Association. They are Duncan Valley Electric, Duncan, Arizona; Navopache Electric, Lakeside, Arizona; and Rio Grande Electric, Brackettville, Texas.

New Mexico's Rural Electric Cooperatives, who are members of the New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperative Association, protect the interests of their consumer-members through their statewide association headquartered in Santa Fe.

Energy Efficiency Programs

To meet up to 5 percent of their co-op requirements for the renewable portfolio standard, rural electric cooperatives provide financial rebates to encourage consumer-members to be more energy efficient.

- Rebates are provided to eligible consumer-members who purchase energy efficient appliances, such as electric water heaters, refrigerators and geothermal ground source heat pumps.
- Electric cooperatives also provide financial rebates toward new construction, and to consumer-members who retrofit their existing homes or businesses with energy efficient items, such as geothermal ground source heat pumps, high R-value insulation, and heating and cooling systems.

- The cooperatives offer free energy audits to consumer-members to identify ways to make their homes or businesses more energy efficient.
- Electric cooperatives also offer a green power program to consumer-members who have the opportunity to purchase renewable energy.

Renewable Energy

New Mexico Rural Electric Cooperatives are leaders in renewable energy, meeting their Renewable Portfolio Standard requirement levels of 5 percent by 2020, while providing more than 25 percent of their energy from solar, wind and hydro.

enchantment Magazine

enchantment Magazine is the voice of New Mexico's rural electric cooperatives. Since 1960, our readers, primarily member-owners of their local electric cooperative, have grown up with enchantment Magazine. Nearly 102,000 New Mexicans receive enchantment monthly directly to their door. Visit www.enchantment.coop to view articles in the enchantment Magazine.

The Seven Cooperative Principles

Cooperatives around the world operate according to the same set of core principles and values, adopted by the International Cooperative Alliance. Cooperatives trace the roots of these principles to the first modern cooperative founded in Rochdale, England in 1844. These principles are a key reason America's electric cooperatives operate differently from other electric utilities, putting the needs of their members first.

- 1. Voluntary and Open Membership: Co-op membership is open to anyone able to use its services.
- 2. Democratic Member Control: Co-ops elect their leaders, who collectively make decisions.
- 3. Members' Economic Participation: Members contribute financially to their cooperative.
- 4. Autonomy and Independence: Cooperatives are autonomous, and any agreements must maintain their independence.
- 5. Education, Training, and Information: Cooperatives educate and train their members and employees.
- 6. Cooperation Among Cooperatives: Cooperatives work together to benefit all co-op members.
- 7. Concern for Community: Cooperatives are committed to improving the communities they call home.

2017 New Mexico Youth Tour Participants

New Mexico's Rural Electric Cooperatives sponsor students to attend the Government-in-Action Youth Tour in Washington, DC, each June to learn about the importance of rural electric cooperatives and about the federal government.
