Simple Philosophy Delivers Sophistication and Beauty

By Dave Perry

Home builders have a unique position in communities. Indeed, they set the tone for the appearance of a given area. In fact, some communities are built entirely around single themes and styles. But in a larger way, architects and builders design dreams and lifestyles for people. Their task is to reflect the vision of people's lives, design it and then build it. And hopefully, if everyone is in tune, the structures will reflect that individual's idea of paradise ... a place they come home to every day, a place they raise their family, entertain friends and call their own. Designing and building homes is a big responsibility, but has many rewards.

Northwest Florida is home to scores of home builders and architects who take that responsibility seriously. Leonardo da Vinci said, "Simplicity is the ultimate sophistication." Like da Vinci, John Pettinato appreciates simplicity in all things, including his home design and building philosophy. "Our building philosophy is simple

... build for customers their dream home. After all, that's why they have come to us. From the first time we meet with potential clients, based on what they share with us, we begin to form an image of the style of home they dream about and from that point on we work hard to design and build their dream and vision," asserts John Pettinato, President of Pettinato Construction, Inc.

A true family business in every sense of the word, Pettinato Construction is blessed with a talented, dedicated team of construction professionals who have in common a positive, "can-do" attitude and a confidence about meeting challenges and succeeding. "It is not so much a job but a way of life," says Pettinato. He finds great pride in building homes that are here to stand the test of time. Since 1987, Pettinato, a licensed and registered general contractor, has been working and building in Santa Rosa County, FL.
