

Disclaimer

Campusfinancial.net's purpose is to provide information and guidance regarding the transition from high school to college, and which may make your college experience more enjoyable and cost efficient. Services are offered with the understanding that campusfinancial.net is not herein engaged in rendering legal, accounting, tax, investment management or other professional services.

If such services are required, professional assistance should be sought. While the intent is also to provide useful and accurate information concerning college planning and financial aid, you should be aware that statutes and procedures are constantly evolving and can be subject to interpretation. It is also important to note that any advice or guidance provided is subjective in nature and the actual results may vary based on several variables, including the qualities of the student, the college, university or program, and the population of applicants at the time.

It is your responsibility to determine your course of action utilizing campusfinancial.net and other resources available. Campusfinancial.net does not make any warranties concerning the information or services offered.